

LOS ANGELES POLICE DEPARTMENT

“To Serve and To Protect”

DEPARTMENT HISTORY The specific Los Angeles Police Force was founded in 1853 as the Los Angeles Rangers, a volunteer force that assisted the existing County forces. The Rangers were soon succeeded by the Los Angeles City Guards, another volunteer group. Neither force was particularly efficient and Los Angeles became known for its violence, gambling and “vice”. The first paid force was created in 1869, when six officers were hired to serve under City Marshal William C. Warren. By 1900, Under John M. Glass, there were 70 officers, one for every 1,500 people. In 1903, with the start of the Civil Service, this force was increased to 200.

During World War II, under Clemence B. Horrall, the overall number of personnel was depleted by the demands of the military. Despite efforts to maintain numbers, the police could do little to control the 1943 Zoot Suit Riots. Horrall was replaced by a retired Marine general William A. Worton, who acted as interim chief until 1950, when William H. Parker was chosen and would serve until his death in 1966 from a heart attack. Parker advocated police professionalism and autonomy from civilian administration. However, the Bloody Christmas scandal in 1951 led to calls for a civilian accountability and an end to alleged police brutality. Under Parker, LAPD also formed the first SWAT (Special Weapons and Tactics) team in United States law enforcement. Officer John Nelson and then-inspector Daryl Gates created the program in 1965 to deal with threats from radical organizations such as the Black Panther Party operating during the Vietnam War era. LAPD's SWAT units is considered by many in law enforcement to be one of the premier units of its kind.
